

Commencing July 1, 2020 out of province electives within Canada are being permitted and considered by both host and home universities. Residents planning to complete an elective in another province must first check to determine if self-isolation is required when they apply for the elective and prior to travelling to the other province. If residents choose to complete electives in provinces that require a two-week self-isolation period, this will be treated as a paid leave. Residents will not be required to use vacation time for the self-isolation period. Program directors and residents are responsible for determining how the timing of the self-isolation period will impact the resident’s training schedule.

Residents with an approved out of province elective and confirmation of a requirement to self-isolate for 14 days should complete this form prior to the start of the self-isolation period.
